Abstrak

Pluralism and tolerance in religion has been sensitive in Indonesia for quite a while. For that reason, it needs a missionary strategy which is appropriate to the environment and condition where the community is mangling. The strategy has also to be relevant to the development of science and technology that the community has been familiar with. Thus, today and in the future it requires a kind of "missionary transformation" which can drive forward the process of reform needed to realize the value of civil society which, in turn, can make people be living in pluralistic community.
